For Your Information

Dangers of medicine in the water system

Recent research conducted by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency and the U.S. Geological Survey found substantial amounts of antibiotics and steroidal hormones in rivers, lakes and wells from samples analyzed in 36 states. For more information, visit www.epa.gov/nerlesd1/chemistry/pharma.

Dangers of needles in trash

According to the US Environmental Protection Agency, each year, 8 million people use more than 3 billion needles, syringes, and lancets, also called sharps, to manage medical conditions at home. Some sharps users throw their used needles in the trash or flush them down the toilet. Used sharps left loose among other waste can hurt sanitation workers during collection rounds, at sorting and recycling facilities and at landfills, or become lodged in equipment, forcing worker to remove them by hand.

Children, adults and even pets are also at risk for needle-stick injuries when sharps are disposed improperly at home or in public settings. For more information, visit www.epa.gov/osw.

Personal Sharps Containers

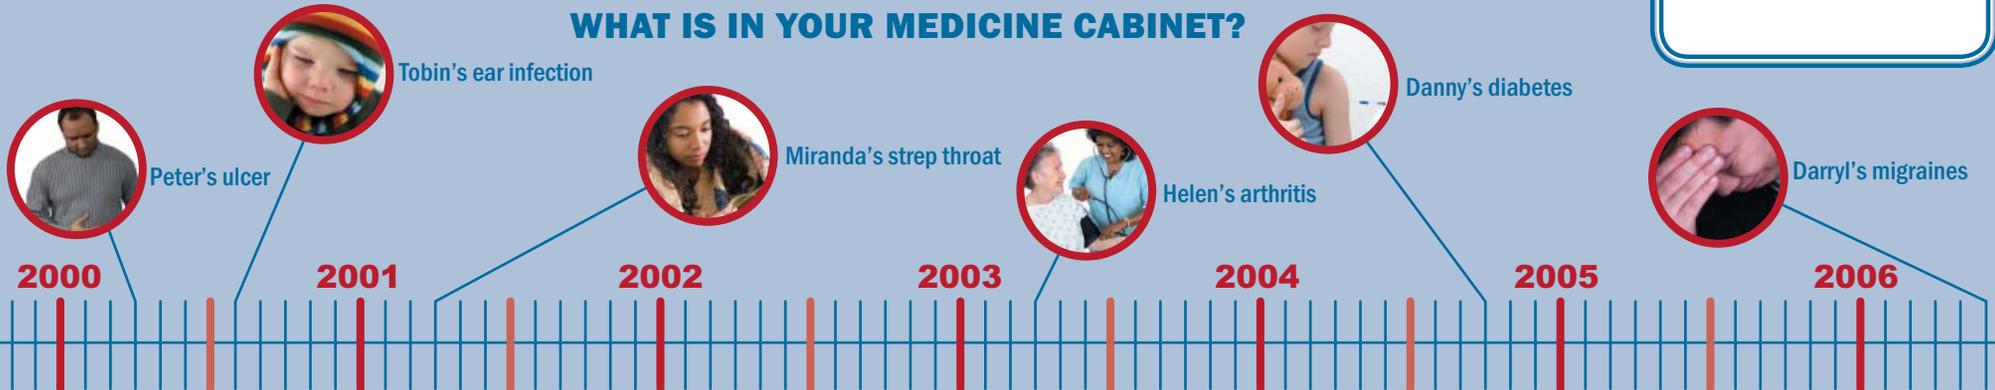

Any resident that lives in a SWANCC-member community and administers home-injections is eligible to receive a 1 quart sharps container. They need to go to the designated prescription drug drop-off site in their community to request one.
